INAUGURAL LECTURES

Four assistant professorships were established at the Faculty of Health Sciences and Medicine in 2024. In their inaugural lectures, our faculty members will provide insights into current projects and findings from research and healthcare practice and debate them with each other and the audience. The four short lectures are characterized by the diversity of innovative and interdisciplinary research on pressing issues in the healthcare sector. Four different perspectives, all of which contribute to the faculty's vision: To promote individual and community health, functioning, and well-being.
