1 ORCID and FIS - what are they?

ORCID

ORCID is a 16-digit number combination, a permanent identifier for researchers, so that they and their achievements remain clearly identifiable despite name changes, different spellings or the same name holders. The ORCID always remains the same regardless of employment.

Researchers can create their own ORCID themselves free of charge (directly at ORCID: <https://orcid.org/register> or from the FIS user profile: FIS → User administration → My profile) In addition, publications and other research achievements can be automatically transferred from a publisher's website to the ORCID profile, for example, or from the ORCID profile to other platforms such as a research information system. An ORCID thus reduces the administrative workload for researchers.

Research information system RIS (FIS Unilu)

The FIS Unilu is a research database for recording, managing, presenting and analysing research-related information.

Researchers record their ongoing, completed and planned research projects as well as publications and other research achievements. They submit applications to the University Research Committee (FoKo) via the FIS module "myFoko" and applications to the Graduate Academy via the FIS module "my Graduate Academy". The recording of data in the FIS is mandatory due to the university's reporting to the canton as well as various other reports and analyses. The publication of the information on research activity recorded in the FIS on the website is desired.

All employees automatically have an FIS profile from the first day of their employment. They log in at <https://fis.unilu.ch> under "Registration" with their Switch edu-ID. User instructions for FIS can be found at <https://www.unilu.ch/fis>.

2 The FIS-ORCID interface

A reciprocal interface between FIS and ORCID allows our university members to quickly export their publication entries from FIS to their ORCID profile or, to import existing entries in the ORCID profile into FIS and complete them with a few manual additions. As some additional information is required in the FIS (e.g. organisational affiliation, information on peer review, etc.), we advise you to make the initial entry in the FIS and export to ORCID (information is reduced during export). However, for people who are new to the University of Lucerne but already have a well-maintained ORCID profile, importing ORCID publications into the FIS significantly reduces the effort required for entering their publications in FIS. If you do not have a well-maintained ORCID profile and are new to the University of Lucerne, but have a well-maintained bibliography in a reference management software, use the import function in the FIS under Publications → Add new → Upload from BibTeX oder Upload from RIS to create your publication records in FIS first and use the FIS-ORCID interface to register with ORCID and transfer your data there.

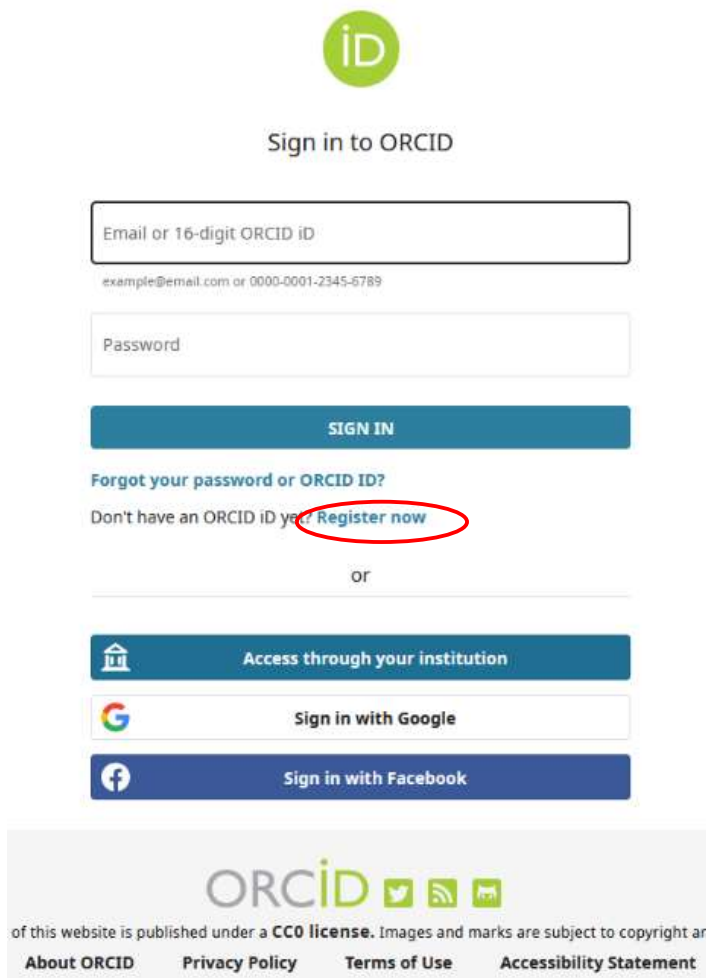

3 No ORCID yet? Register with ORCID and authorise data exchange

You don't have an ORCID yet? In this case you need to register first. You can register directly at <https://orcid.org/register>. Or you can register with ORCID from your FIS profile. To do this in FIS, go to User administration → My profile. There is an "ORCID" field in the profile, which is used to operate the FIS-ORCID interface.

If you are using the interface for the first time, you must actively authorise the data exchange. If you do not yet have an ORCID, you can also register here. To do this, click on "Request ORCID authorisation token".

You will be taken to the ORCID registration page. Select "register now" to register:

Then enter the information required to create the profile (name, e-mail address, password). Also select who is authorised to view your ORCID entries:

Visibility settings

By default, what visibility should be given to new items added to your ORCID Record?

- ☐  Everyone (87% of users choose this)
Everyone can see these items
- ☐  Trusted parties (5% of users choose this)
Only people and organizations you've given permission
- ☐  Only me (8% of users choose this)
Items are private and only visible to you

More information on visibility settings

After you have completed the registration, you will be asked to authorise the exchange between the FIS and ORCID. Select "Authorise access" to be able to use the interface in the FIS.

4 ORCID exists already? Authorise data exchange between FIS and ORCID

If you already have an ORCID profile, you still need to authorise the data exchange between FIS and ORCID via the interface. To do this in FIS, go to User administration → My profile. There is an "ORCID" field in the profile, which is used to operate the FIS-ORCID interface.

If you are using the interface for the first time, you must actively authorise the data exchange. Click on "Request ORCID authorisation token".

You will be taken to the ORCID login page. Select "Sign in" to log in:

You will then be asked to authorise the exchange between the research information system (FIS Unilu) and ORCID. Select "Authorise access" to be able to use the interface in the FIS

5 Exporting and importing data via the interface

There is no automatic data import or export via the interface. You can actively initiate an import from ORCID and select entries to be imported if you use the "Import data from ORCID Works into FIS" function. You can also actively initiate an export and select the FIS entries to be exported using the "Export data from FIS to ORCID Works" function: You can also be notified if new entries have been added to your ORCID profile that you have not yet imported into FIS (webhook function). Activate this function via the "Activate ORCID notifications" button.

5.1 Exporting publication data from FIS to ORCID

As FIS entries are more detailed due to university reporting requirements, we recommend that university members with a well-maintained FIS profile primarily make use of the export function from the FIS to the ORCID profile. This way, the information you have carefully entered in FIS is reduced during export. There will be no effort for you in post-processing the data in the ORCID profile. When manually entering new research services, you should therefore ideally first create an entry in the FIS and then export it to your ORCID profile.

To export FIS entries of the "Publications" category, click on "Export data from FIS to ORCID Works".

You will be taken to an overview of your publications recorded in FIS, from which you can select individual publications and export them to ORCID or export all publications at once.

5.2 Importing publication data from ORCID into the FIS

In some cases, importing data from the ORCID profile into the FIS profile is recommended. This is particularly useful if you have a well-maintained ORCID profile but your FIS profile is still empty and you want to add many new publications to the FIS that are already in the ORCID profile. It also makes sense to import from the ORCID profile into the FIS if individual publications have been newly added to your ORCID profile, e.g. by publishers, and you would also like these entries in the FIS.

Please note that when importing into FIS, all entries must be supplemented with information that is not available in ORCID (e.g. organisational unit, whether peer-reviewed or not, etc.). You must therefore edit the entries manually (all mandatory fields must be completed, and you must finalise the entry by clicking on "complete" below the form for each entry).

To import ORCID entries in the "Publications" category, click on "Import ORCID Works data".

You will be taken to a page that shows you which publications have not yet been transferred from your ORCID profile to the FIS profile. Please note that you may have maintained both the profiles in the past and entered some publications in both places. The FIS recognizes as publications available for import all publication records in ORCID that have not been imported via the interface previously. In some cases possible duplicates (e.g., because of same DOI) will be marked as such. Hence, make sure not to create unnecessary duplicated by importing publications that you have entered in both systems in the past.

Select which of these should be imported and click on "Import".

A message will appear in your FIS profile indicating which publication has been imported. You can open and edit the entry/entries by clicking on the new MCSS ID number:

The screenshot shows the FIS profile page for a user named Martens, Silvia. A pink message box at the top states "ORCID Work imported. Output ID: 74457", with the ID number circled in red. The left sidebar contains navigation links: Logout, User administration, My profile (selected), Access/Roles, My Page, and Research projects. The main content area shows the "My profile" section with a "Status" bar indicating the profile type is "Internal".

Please note that all publications imported in this way will remain in the FIS as entries with the status "incomplete" until you have filled in all mandatory fields and clicked on "complete" at the bottom of the form.

You should therefore regularly check under Publications → List of publications whether your publications appear with the status "published". As long as they have the status "incomplete", you have probably not yet filled in all mandatory fields or have not yet clicked on "complete" to finalise and release the entry.

The screenshot shows the FIS Publications list for the same user. The page title is "Publications (31)". A search bar is located at the top right. The table below lists three publications. The first publication, with ID 74416, is marked as "Incomplete" (circled in red), while the other two are marked as "Published".
