

Kultur- und Sozialwissenschaftliche Fakultät

ÖFFENTLICHER VORTRAG

International migration and family life: is there still need for protection of religious personal statutes?

Prof. Dr. Marie-Claire Foblets, Max-Planck-Institut für ethnologische Forschung

DINNSTAG, 26. NOVEMBER 2019, 16.15–18.00 UHR

UNIVERSITÄT LUZERN, FROHBURGSTRASSE 3, RAUM 3.B47

Der universitäre Forschungsschwerpunkt FaMiGlia lädt Sie herzlich zum öffentlichen Vortrag zu internationaler Migration, Familienleben und Religionsfreiheit von Prof. Dr. Marie-Claire Foblets ein. Prof. Dr. Marie-Claire Foblets ist Direktorin der Abteilung ‚Recht & Ethnologie‘ am Max-Planck-Institut für ethnologische Forschung in Halle und Honorarprofessorin für Recht und Ethnologie an der Martin-Luther-Universität Halle-Wittenberg.

International migration and family life: is there still need for protection of religious personal statutes?

The impact of international migration to Europe on family life has preoccupied politicians, practitioners, and scholars for the last 60 years, but its importance increased dramatically with the influx of refugees in 2015.

Against this background, this presentation focuses on two questions: First, how can European law deal with the dilemmas presented by family forms that challenge European legal statutes? On the one hand, humanitarian principles counsel allowing families to continue in forms that pre-dated their migration; on the other hand, too liberal an interpretation of familial norms may give rise to conflicts with restrictive migration policies. Second, how can the religious dimensions of the family form be accommodated by European civil law without generating legal consequences that conflict with other aspects of European law? One example is religious marriages that are not registered in the civil law of the European country of residence. The presentation will demonstrate that these concerns have become particularly acute in the majority of European states today.

Der Vortrag steht allen Interessierten offen und kann kostenfrei besucht werden.

Information

Universität Luzern
Forschungsschwerpunkt FaMiGlia
Laura Preissler
Frohburgstrasse 3
6002 Luzern
laura.preissler@unilu.ch